

Incumbent Worker Training for Maine Companies

The TechHire Partnership Grant is a program to help build a highly skilled, highly trained workforce for Maine's information technology (IT) and computing sector. Incumbent worker training dollars available under TechHire to Maine employers can assist with your company upskilling needs. The grant helps you support the front-line, entry and mid-level workers of your IT business with the valuable short-term or accelerated skill upgrading or customized training of your choosing.

Training must result in employees attaining an industry-recognized credential or certificate applicable to the Information Technology industry sector. Employees must be a Maine resident to be served with grant funds.

Training grants offered by TechHire depend on the size of your company and cost of training program you are considering.

Projects that will be given special consideration under this funding opportunity are those in which employees successfully completing training are promoted into new positions or otherwise advance within the IT industry sector.
